ALASKA CALLED ON TO MOBILIZE HER RESOURCES

Secretary Redfield, in a Letter to the Sentinel, Appeals to the People of Alaska to Develop the Sea Food Industry

Alaska must mobilize her fisheries. William C. Redfield, of the United States Department of Commerce, has written a letter to the editor of the Sentinel in which he calls attention to the urgent need of increasing the catch of seafood in northern waters. The demand for dry preserved herring and other fish will be great next winter, he says, and agents of the bureau of fisheries will lend all assistance possible to fishermen in increasing the output and in giving them instruction in method of curing.

The Secretary's letter follows:

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE
WASHINGTON

April 26, 1917.

Mr. J. W. Pritchett,
Publisher Sentinel,
Wrangell, Alaska.

Dear Sir:

In his recent letter to the American people the President has eloquently and clearly presented the duty and privilege of every citizen to rally to the support of the country in the emergency now confronting it. He laid particular emphasis on the opportunity afforded those, who for various reasons may not be able to join the fighting forces, to render other service no less necessary and laudable, especially in increasing the supply of foodstuffs of which under the stress of war there is likelihood of a dearth. It is necessary that the present sources of food supply should be maintained and new sources created and developed in order to provide well fed men for the conduct of actual military operations. The success of the unselfish undertaking in which the country has embarked is dependent on each one of us performing his full patriotic duty in the field in which he can be used most effectively.

Alaska came under the flag at the close, and largely as a result of one great conflict, and it has just completed its first half century of useful Americanism on the eve of another. It is peculiarly fitted by reason of its great natural resources and the enterprise of those who do business within its borders for rendering further and inestimable services at this critical time in the country's history, and I am confident that it will respond to the call of duty and opportunity.

It is probable that there will be difficulty in materially increasing the yield of some of the fisheries of the Atlantic coast on account of the demand for small vessels for military services. Alaska's duty arises from the fact that it is absolutely necessary to increase the total yield of the fisheries and her opportunity lies in her possession of vast unutilized fishery resources. The salmon fisheries in many places are being prosecuted as intensively as is permissible with due consideration to the danger of overfishing and the maintenance of the future supply, and moreover are so well organized that they will undoubtedly be conducted vigorously during the coming season, but there are other fishes in abundance which are not used as they should be.

The most important of these is the herring, which is widely distributed and in quality is equal to that of the Atlantic. The demand for this fish, pickled, is growing rapidly. The sablefish (black cod) for which the Bureau of Fisheries is establishing a large market, fresh, frozen and kippered, is one of the finest of American food fishes and exceedingly abundant in South-eastern Alaska and contiguous waters. The atka fish, frequently called "atka mackerel" and "attu mackerel," is regarded by many as superior to the true mackerel when pickled in the same manner.

All of these fishes lend themselves to preservation by salting and in view of the dearth of tin plate, which may interfere with any large increase in the pack of canned fish, I cannot too strongly urge that large quantities of all of them be cured during the coming season. There is no doubt that the demand for them will be heavy next winter and the Bureau of Fisheries will take steps to make the public acquainted with their merits. The Bureau's agents in Alaska will lend fishermen and salteries all possible assistance, and information concerning methods of curing will be furnished to those desiring it.

Aside from service rendered to the country, there is now presented an unusual opportunity to enlarge and broaden the fishery industries of Alaska, for a market established at this time is certain to be maintained when peace comes. Now is the time to act.

Very truly yours,

WILLIAM C. REDFIELD,
Secretary.

PROTEST AGAINST CONFIRMATION OF TANNER'S APPOINTMENT

(Daily Alaskan)

That a protest has been sent to Washington against the confirmation of the nomination of J. M. Tanner as United States marshal for the first district of Alaska and that the signers of the protest endorsed United States Commissioner E. A. Rasmuson for the position, was made public here today.

Announcement of this action was made following the circulation of a petition in support of Mr. Tanner's candidacy. The petition is addressed to the judiciary committee of the senate, in whose hands the nomination by the President now is. The petition was drawn up here Wednesday, following the arrival of Mr. Tanner from Juneau.

Mr. Tanner is now acting as marshal under appointment of Judge Jennings, to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Harry Bishop, who quit the office after the escape of Krause.

Both Mr. Tanner and Judge Rasmuson are Democrats. Both are also Skagway men. Judge Rasmuson has lived here since last spring. Besides being United States Commissioner, he is also deputy clerk of the district court.

Judge Rasmuson came to Alaska in 1904 from Minneapolis. He was first a government school teacher in Yakutat, and later was United States commissioner there from 1911 to 1914.

He has been admitted to practice before the courts of Alaska and also before the supreme court of Minnesota.

British Lose Heavily

BERLIN, May 1.—The War Department announced the severe defeat of the British in their attempts to take the village of Oppy on Scarpe. Six thousand British fell in and before German positions. Nineteen thousand prisoners and forty machine guns were captured and ten tanks destroyed. Strong artillery fighting continues on both sides of the banks of the Scarpe.

HORTICULTURAL FAIR SUGGESTED FOR WRANGELL

Civic Improvement Club Believes That a Creditable Display of Flowers and Vegetables Could Be Shown in Early Fall.

It has been suggested that a small fair be held in Wrangell at the close of the contest which the Civic Club announced last week, or later. A very creditable display of flowers and vegetables might be shown and a picture of the exhibit would prove valuable advertising matter for Wrangell. There is much food for thought in the suggestion.

Two public spirited citizens with cameras, offered to take a few of the pictures required in the Yard contest announced in the Sentinel last, free of charge. They are Mrs. K. Talmage and Mr. H. P. Corser. Are there others? Contestants will do well to give their names to the committee, Miss Woods and Mrs. Johnson, as early as possible in order to get the benefit of this free service.

Baby Week

May 1st to May 6th is Baby Week all over this great nation of ours. The 20th century is becoming known as "The Children's Century" because of the vast amount of work being done in behalf of the children, and 1916 has taken its place as "Baby Year." During that year about 2000 communities observed Baby Week but that was just a beginning and an effort is being made to impress upon the entire nation its duty to the child. It is an appalling fact that one out of every seven babies dies before it is a year old. Much of this mortality is preventable.

Mothers are sacrificed needlessly just when they are so necessary to the well-being of the child. Many babies are born blind or lose their sight at birth; others, deformed or lacking in mental ability, become a burden to society. Every child has a right to be well-born; every mother should be safeguarded against conditions that promote loss of life or worse. Thoughtful, earnest, capable men, women and organizations are speedily coming to the rescue by inaugurating educational campaigns. During Baby Week such topics as "The Care of Children," "Safe Milk Supply," "Baby Life Savers," "Maternal Morality," "Rural Child Welfare" and others will be discussed and tons of educational literature will be spread broadcast. "Save the Babies!" is the cry. The nation is learning to prevent death and blindness, and the child with a physical or mental handicap may become a most valued citizen. Child labor laws are being enacted and conditions are improving. The Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor is aided in the great work of conserving life by the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Mother's Congress, Teacher's Associations and universities, colleges and schools. The churches are giving their help by devoting the Sunday of Baby Week to appropriate sermons and exercises.

It is impossible for the Civic Club to arrange a suitable observance of Baby Week for Wrangell at this time but an effort will be made to have a lecture on one of the above topics or along the same line at some future date.

DIG, HOE, PLANT, AND WEED

Dig for your country. Hoe for your country. Plant for your country. Weed for your country. Harvest for your country.

War calls for men to fight. It also calls for men to plant. The planting is, this year, as much an act of patriotism as the fighting. The call is for America to feed Europe. This can not be accomplished unless every American does his duty. Every American should strive to cultivate every bit of ground that he possibly can, so that the harvest the coming year will be the bumper one in the history of the country.

What Can Wrangell Do?

Up to this time, most everything that has gone on Wrangell tables has been imported from below. This is not because our gardens can not produce everything that we need. It is because we have not taken the trouble, to any extent, to plant gardens.

Our potatoes, turnips, onions, and carrots are the best in the world. Our peas, cabbage and cauliflower are equal to any. Why not then have gardens, so that food raised in the States need not be sent our way, but can be shipped to Europe where it is so much needed.

This will incidentally also help Wrangell.

Would not Wrangell be much better off if the money that is sent away for vegetables, chickens, eggs, etc., be kept at home. So this is an instance where loyalty to your town, and patriotism, go hand in hand.

This year why not let all agree to buy as far as possible only from our local gardeners. Let "Grown in Wrangell" occupy the place of honor on our tables.

Reasonable Request.

A cool individual was awakened one night by burglars. As he entered the dining room, where they were busily engaged in wrapping up the plate, they promptly covered him with their guns. But this did not seem to perturb him.

"Don't let me disturb you, gentlemen," he said, "but when you go—if it's not troubling you too much—would you do me the favor of posting this letter? It must go tonight. It's my burglary insurance."

Sunday in Old Scotland.

Looking out of the window used to be an indictable offense on the Sabbath, the London Chronicle says. In 1709 the kirk session of Edinburgh, "taking into consideration that the Lord's day is profaned by people standing in the streets, vaguing in the fields and gardens, as also by idly gazing out of windows, it is ordered that each session take its turn to watch the streets on Sabbath and to visit each suspected house in each parish by elders and deacons with beadle and officers, and after sermon, when the day is long, to pass through the streets and to reprove such as transgress and inform on such as do not refrain."

Lost on the Mountain Side

By ETHEL HOLMES

"Anything for me today, Sam?" asked a girl of a rural postman trudging along a road in Tennessee.

"Yes; I reckon I got one for you, Susie," said the man, looking over a bundle of letters he carried in his hand. Not finding it, he dived down into his bag and pulled out its contents, which he examined carefully.

"Well, now, that knocks me out," he said, with troubled and puzzled expression on his face. "When I sorted the letters for my route at the post-office I sure saw one for you."

"And it's gone?" cried the girl in a frightened tone.

"Wait till I look 'em over again."

He examined every letter again and with the same result as before. He scratched his head in thought.

"I stopped at the tavern for something to warm me and threw my bag down on a chair."

"Oh, Sam! Was there any one in the room with you?"

"Let me see. There was a lean, hungry looking man in spectacles."

"And a red beard?"

"Pears to me he had a red beard."

The girl turned and ran away from the postman, who followed her with his eyes till she was out of sight.

Susie Barker, the girl in question, ran till she came to the tavern. There she stopped and asked the landlord which way the man with a red beard had gone. He had departed immediately after the postman had gone in the direction of the Cumberland plateau, the base of which was but a mile distant. Susie set out at a run, but she could not keep such a pace and soon settled into a hurried walk. A short distance from the foothills she saw the man she was after ascending the hill. She knew the trails leading up to the plateau and struck into one that was shorter than that the man was taking. She had not gone far before the two paths crossed. Sitting down on a stone, she waited for him to come to her.

"Howdy," she said to the stranger when he came up.

"Howdy," replied the man, scrutinizing the girl. "Yer not lost, are y'?"

"Well, I dunno. I come up hyer to find a gal I know, and I thort she lived purty nigh this place, but I don't find her somehow. I ain't used to these mountings. I never come up this way."

She looked exhausted and troubled.

"She was very plainly dressed, but was rather comely for a rough country girl."

"Is there anything I can do for you?" she asked.

"Nothin', unless you can put me on the track to find my friend I'm lookin' for. But maybe you're a stranger in these parts yerself."

The man looked uneasy. He had good reason to shake the girl, but did not exactly know how to go about it.

"You're right there. I don't see how I can help you, since I'm not familiar with the country about here."

The girl looked about her with troubled glances. The man started to go on.

"Yer not goin' to leave a pore gal out hyer on this lonely hillside, air y'?" she said, looking at him reproachfully.

"I don't see how I can help it," said the man. "I don't know where you want to go, and I've got to get on my self."

"D' y' mind my goin' on with y'?" she asked pitifully.

"Well, I don't see how I can do that," was the reply, "seem' that I'll have to walk a great deal faster than you can."

"Try me."

The man looked perplexed. He couldn't very well leave a girl who was lost on the mountain side, and in the business in which he was engaged she would be an obstacle to him. Indeed, he could not very well accomplish it without getting rid of her.

"I haven't time to bother with you," he said crabbedly. "All you got to do is to go down the mountain and you'll find plenty of persons to tell you how to get home."

With that he started on, but, bearing a sob, turned and saw the girl with her hands to her face, shaking convulsively.

There is no weapon so powerful as a woman's tears. The man turned and went back to the girl. He did not get away from her for an hour. First he spent a good deal of time soothing her. Then she told him that she had sprained her ankle and could not walk. Finally footsteps were heard coming from above, and a young man appeared on the trail. He started on seeing the girl and the man.

"I reckon," said the girl to the man with the red beard, "that this feller will take me down. Much obliged to you all the same."

The man addressed looked the other over and without a word started up the trail. The two watched him till he was out of sight, then the girl threw her arm around the newcomer.

"He's got the letter you wrote me. I reckoned it had the way to find you laid down purty clear, hadn't it?"

"Yes, it had."

"He tuk it from the postman. I followed him and have been delayin' him hyar, hopin' to find some way to warn you."

"Well, he'll get the still, but he won't get me."

Clasped in each other's arms, they rejoiced that the delay she had caused had saved him from arrest and perhaps a term of imprisonment.

"Better give up makin' whisky, Ben," she said.

"I'll do it for your sake."

Few realize how RUST threatened the extinction of "Steel Ranges." Sheet metal, steel or iron is the ideal material for range bodies and ovens. But RUST would destroy it! Rust that worked from the inside not outside.

So there the MONARCH built its defence—of VITREOUS ENAMEL, a material you know from every day household experience is not effected by Rust. Every inch of the MONARCH'S flues is covered with this non-rusting protection.

You can enjoy the satisfaction of cooking on a MONARCH Range year in and year out. No danger of breakdown—no danger of rusting out, just continued satisfactory service. We don't know for how long! But from the looks of this splendid Range we'd guess a life time.

Come in—look it over and see if you don't agree with us.

St. Philip's Church

The last lecture on "Man's place in Nature" at St. Philip's Church answered the question "How can man realize his destiny?" by first saying that he must fight with all the strength and wisdom that science can provide; and then, by adding that with the fighting there should go a determination to give of his strength to others.

Rome fought, and ruled for her own selfish ends, and tell.

Britain learned in the terrible experiences of the Sepoy rebellion and in her loss of the United States, that she must rule for others, and, as a consequence, all her colonies are loyal to her. She is strong. So with the individual, he must give, in order to be strong. The lecture next Sunday evening will continue the theme by looking on man alone. The subject will be "Man and Himself."

These subjects are all practical. Can you afford to miss any of them? Come.

Joe Baronovich expects to leave with the river steamer Nahlin for Telegraph Creek within the next ten days.

He is a young fellow whom we unhesitatingly recommend to this community as worthy of its respect and confidence.
